Address, Prin. Ralph L. Hunt of Hebron Academy.

Vocal solo, "One Fleeting Hour," Mrs. Brown, accompanied by Mrs. Tucker and Mrs. Bryant.

Program committee for the January meeting: Miss Maxine Clough, chairman, Mrs. Celia Gorman and Mrs. Doris Bryant.

GOULD TAKES OPENER 44-16

Gould Academy had little trouble trouncing Gorham High in the opening game 44-16. It however took the home team over a period to find themselves and get a substantial lead. The score at the end of the first period was 6-5 for Gould but Gorham scored first in the second stanza to lead 7-6. Here the fireworks started with the winners scoring four baskets in less than a minute. From this point on, it was a matter of just how many points the home team would score.

Johnson, with 19 points to his credit, shone on the offense. He proved himself a strong factor in taking rebounds off the basket.

Both the veteran guards played well, Parker Brown scoring nine points and Eddy Robertson eight. Palmer, a very inexperienced player, shows great promise. His height is a distinct advantage. Rodney Wentzell, the other forward, did not show up as well as expected but once he finds his shooting eye plenty can be expected from him.

Gorham's star player was Rhuland, their running guard, who scored eight of his team's 16 points. The visitors used a five man zone defense which slowed up the game but could not stop the winners from scoring freely.

Howard Gayton of Norway, charged with manslaughter in the death of George Ayer, 63, early Sunday morning, pleaded not guilty and was held in $1,000 bail for appearance at the March term of the grand jury. It was charged that Gayton's car struck Mr. Ayer while he was crossing the road to notify a neighbor of fire in the house of Mrs. Hazel Wheeler, his daughter, with whom he was living. The buildings were damaged to the extent of $3,500.

25 Couples Freed From Marital Bond

Ruth B. Parsons from George S. Parsons, both of South Paris, cruel and abusive treatment.

THE CHURCH BELLS WILL RING

If you hear the church bells ringing on Monday evening do not be alarmed. It will only be a part of the presentation of "The Old Peabody Pew" given in the Congregational church which, with a well chosen cast, promises to be a splendid performance. The rehearsals have been most satisfactory and it is hoped that the church will be well filled to enjoy the play.

Mrs. F. L. Edwards has been largely responsible for this entertainment and to her and to Mrs. Laurence Lord with her corps of assistants is due much credit. The cast is as follows:

Sexton, Edward Hanscom
Organist, Mrs. Mildred Lyon
Reader, Miss Ruth Leavengood
Mrs. Burbank, President,
Mrs. Barbara Lyon

Lobelia Brewster, Mrs. Doris Lord
Mrs. Miller, Miss Dorothy Hanscom
Mrs. Sargent,
Miss Gwendolyn Stearns

Maria Sharp, Miss Marguerite Hall
Mrs. Baxter, the minister's wife,
Mrs. Ruth Carver
Nancy Wentworth,
Mrs. Mary Lu Sayles

Sally Bixby, Priscilla Carver
Widow Buzzell, Mrs. Lora Brown
Justin Peabody, Philip Sayles

The ticket committee consists of the following young ladies: Beatrice Brown and Harriet Merrill, assisted by Esther Burris, Doris Lord and Jane Van. Telephone to them or call at But's store for tickets.

Urges State Idle To Register

Immediate registration of all of the unemployed in the State of Maine has been asked by the Maine State Unemployment Compensation Commission, according to an announcement from the administrative offices in Augusta. Clifford A. Somerville, chairman of the Commission, stated that the appeal would be carried to every quarter of the State and that all idle workers would be urged to register at the office of the State Employment Service nearest to place of residence.

"This appeal is intended not alone for those not covered by the unemployment compensation law, but likewise applies to those who are now idle and who intend to file claims for benefits after January 1, 1938," said Mr. Somerville. "Continuous registration of the unemployed may be the means of avoiding much confusion when the day of filing of claims under provisions of the new law arrives."

"The commission will have a gigantic situation to cope with once the hour is at hand when those entitled to receive benefits from the unemployment trust fund start the filing of claims. It will be necessary in that instance for all claimants to first register for reemployment before consideration is given to their claims. Registration now by all who later may be declared eligible to receive weekly benefit payments will help to speed the work of those in the claims divisions of the field offices."

"At the same time interviewers in these 20 offices will continue their work of employer-contacts in the hope of uncovering vacancies to which those registered may be referred. It is possible under this plan to place a number of workers in desirable and suitable positions prior to January 1, and thus avoid the necessity of paying benefits in all cases now pending through recent layoff of workers."

Band To Play For Basketball

On Friday night the Gould quintet will meet a tough rival in their second encounter of the season. Livermore is noted for its fine basketball teams and although this is their opening game the local boys may expect plenty of trouble. This game will start immediately after the preliminary game with the Alumni.

Coach Anderson is working hard to iron out a few of the weaknesses discovered in the opening game. The fine game played by Don Holt in last Friday's preliminary has gained for him consideration as a probable varsity man. It looks now as if he will be a very reliable reserve man for either a guard or forward position.

Alumni Play Reserves

At 7:15 the Gould Academy Alumni will stack up against the Gould reserves in which should be a real battle. This should be a game well worth seeing as the second team will be strengthened by the addition of Bill Howe, a P. G. man who practices with the varsity. These games will again be handled by Pignone and Spinks.

Music by Bethel Band

The Bethel Band will be in attendance at the games, rendering selections before and between the games and between the halves. The musical program will begin at seven o'clock.

MOTHERS CLUB PLANS SOCIAL

Mrs. Robert York entertained the Mother's Club Wednesday afternoon. There were 15 adults and nine children present. At the business session a social was planned but no date set and committees chosen as follows: Games, Mrs. Norman Hall; Refreshments, Mrs. Stanley Wentzell.

A short program was then presented as follows: Reading, Christmas Giving, Mrs. Richard Brown; Reading, Five Little Spruce Trees, Mrs. Ralph Berry; Recitation, When Santa Claus Comes, Quentia Hall. Gifts from a very pretty decorated tree were then distributed to the children and members of the Club. Delicious home made candy was served by the hostess.

ALBANY MAN BADLY BURNED—CABIN DESTROYED

The two room camp of Patrick Murphy at the foot of Songa Pond on the Pattee's Mill road was burned to the ground Saturday night. Urbain Decormier, who was asleep in the cabin when it caught fire narrowly escaped death. Decormier went to the camp after supper, built a fire and then went to sleep. On waking he discovered the camp in flames. In getting out, his hands were severely burned, also his face and hair. A band and visor was all that was left of the cap he was wearing. His cries were heard by persons attending the dance at the pavilion in that vicinity, who found him unconscious.

Curatio Parker, who has been spending several weeks with his son Elmer at Livermore Falls, returned to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Clyde Brooks, Sunday.

DISTRIBUTE, DON'T DESTROY CROPSby Senator William E. Borah
in January Rural Progress Mag.

Congress is not dealing with farm legislation to meet an emergency, but is seeking to establish a permanent policy for agriculture. Things which may be justified to meet an emergency may be extremely unwise as a permanent policy. It does not seem to me that compulsory reduction of crops, in other words compulsory destruction of foodstuffs, has any place in a sound permanent agricultural policy. In this country we have millions, literally millions, in great need of those things which it is proposed by some that we destroy. We ought to thank our farmers every day of our lives for the energy and industry and intelligence which gives this country a surplus and devote ourselves to finding a wise method of distributing that surplus rather than destroying it. This surplus of foodstuffs belongs in the stomachs of American children, millions of whom are undernourished and poorly clad, and in the homes and cupboards of millions of families. It is wicked to penalize the farmer, to put him in a strait-jacket, for producing that which American people sorely need but which we have not yet found a way to distribute. If the American people as a whole could have the necessities of life, there would not be any overproduction upon the farm. Our task of legislation is not destruction but distribution.

If it is found necessary to draw upon the public treasury in order to deal with the farm problem, I would rather support a measure to buy up and store the surplus and see that it gets to those in need of it, rather than to buy destruction. It has been demonstrated that if the American people as a whole could enjoy a decent standard of living, they would need at least ten million more food producing acres to meet the demand.

We are told that we are now following the plan, in a measure, of that inspired Hebrew leader who, thousands of years ago in Egypt, undertook to deal with surpluses. But there was no curtailment of production, no reduction of production in Joseph's scheme, Joseph had many strange dreams but he never dreamed of destroying foodstuffs. The central idea of Joseph's plan was production and distribution at the right time and under the proper circumstances.

We have a surplus in this country not because of producing more than we need but because a vast proportion of our people have not the means to buy what they ought to have. You can go into millions of American homes, not relief homes, either, and you will find the housewife cutting out the meat supply more and more days in the week, skimping here and there on food, keeping more children out of school because they are undernourished. While that condition prevails in this country, I feel we ought to find some way to deal with the matter rather than by compulsory reduction of foodstuffs.

Let us consider this question from another viewpoint. The able Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Wallace, spoke a while ago at Memphis on the cotton control question. Mr. Wallace is too candid to discuss effectively a reduction scheme. It appears that since we began cotton reduction and control, foreign nations have increased their cotton supply by more than ten million bales. When we advertise to the world that we are going to reduce our acreage in any world commodity it excites other nations to increase their acreage, which other nations are now doing. The cotton producer is in almost as serious a condition now as he ever experienced. What has happened to the cotton grower will inevitably happen to those who produce wheat or corn under the same policy. Our good neighbor, Canada, will put in two additional acres of wheat for every acre we reduce. Our good neighbor on the south, Argentina, will do likewise with reference to corn; and with our trade agreements opening our markets to this increased production abroad, where will the American farmer finally land?

Another thing which our candid Secretary of Agriculture states, in effect, is that as America's share of the world's cotton crop continues to decrease, we must make from time to time, reduction of acreage in order to maintain prices. In other words, the philosophy of reduction necessitates continued reduction. Between the upper and nether millstones of increased production abroad and decreased production at home, the American farmer will not only lose the foreign market but will have to fight for his life in the home market.

There was a fine gathering of young people from Upton, Newry and Errol on Friday evening at Upton. We are glad to have social meetings of the young people from different towns.

The men of Upton and Newry met again last Monday at Bear River Grange where Attorney Alton C. Wheeler of Auburn gave an inspiring talk on Citizenship. The men are looking forward to some more tall stories when they meet in Upton in January. Frank Vail is ready for all comers and Lon Wight is busy thinking up some good ones.

On Thursday, Miss Carrie Wight spoke before the Upton Ladies' Aid. The church services will be at the regular hours on this coming Sunday. The service at Wilson's Mills will be at 2:30 in the afternoon.

We are looking forward to the Christmas Play, "The Song of the Christmas Angel," which will be presented in the evening at the Bear River Grange on Sunday, December 19th.

We are glad to have Mr. Fitzpatrick back with us again. We are also glad to hear that Mrs. Fitzpatrick is recovering rapidly in the Deaconess Hospital, Boston, after her operation.

Analysis of rural highway accidents in Connecticut showed that for five consecutive years the greatest number of fatal accidents involved drivers from 20 to 23 years of age.

Sunday River

L. E. Wight repaired the telephone line last week.

The International Paper Co. are hauling boom logs and wire fences to use along the river.

Irene Foster is home for a few days from Maple Inn.

Frank Gorman was in town Sunday.

Mrs. Grace Bartlett is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Nowlin.

Mrs. J. H. Crosby has gone to Kitchener, Ontario, for the winter with the Julian Howards.

Bruce Bailey has begun work on the Ernest Walker land cutting mill wood.

THE LOW DOWN from HICKORY GROVE

About every place I go, people are wonderin' about what is goin'
on with business and prices, and they are sorta up a tree and confused. And the folks down there on the Potomac, they are kinda up to their neck explainin' why everything is not grand and rosy like they said it would be.

And right along we been told
that another law
or two would fix
everything up
sweet and pretty,
and the rivers
would run up
hills or sideways
or whichever way
the law says for
'em to run.

But right recent, everybody seems to be sorta
gettin' woke up at about the same time, and we are like Rip Van Winkle—the powder was wet and his pants was ragged—and we been dreamin', but not gettin' any place.
And now, if we will take a couple stretches, and a hitch in our belt and get over our ideas that somebody is gonna feed us, and look after us every minute, and we go to work, maybe our nap did us some good, after all.

Yours, with the low down

SAILFISH, BEWARE! ... Turning his back on the special session of Congress, President Roose-

OBJECT LESSON ... Talk of the nation's that the first year's benefits of his "Take care of industry and were $37,000,000 in new factory construction

and employment for 17,000 workers.

NOT IN THE SCRIPT ... Martha Raye suffered a sprained ankle and John Payne lost a toenail
when they fell from a balcony during the filming
of a new picture in Hollywood. The cameras, grinding at the time, caught the unusual scene.

INNOCENTS ABROAD ... Tiniest ocean voyagers were the four-month-old Coelin twins,

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner
Falls, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual, National and International Problems
Inseparable from Local Welfare

As Congress settles down to work, each branch has on its calendar a sizable list of important laws which were passed at the last session by one of the Houses
but not by the other. The status of these bills is not changed by the ending of the first session—they go over into the following session on precisely the same basis as if Congress had not adjourned at all.

Some of them will come up in the current special session—those which do not, will come into prominence when the regular, concluding session of the 75th Congress is called in January. The United States News recently published a summary of the more important acts which have met the approval of one branch, and are yet to be passed or condemned by the other.

The Senate, in its first session,
passed several extremely important measures, which are now ready for House of Representatives' scrutiny.
These bills are:

WAGES AND HOURS: The bill creates a Federal Board with sweeping powers to establish maximum hours of work and minimum wages under certain restrictions.
It is an Administration "must" measure, and was one of the two desired laws which led to the calling of the special session. Chance for passage in present form is only fair; there is a better chance that extensive revision will be demanded. Business sentiment is solidified against the bill, not primarily, because of fear of the wages and hours standards it provides, but because of the feeling that the board would be a czar over industry. The business recession, which has resulted in a strong desire on the part of many congressmen to make the special and the next regular session reassuring to industry, has damaged the bill's chances.

CHILD LABOR: Will probably pass, then become an issue in the courts.

WHEAT INSURANCE: Would
set up a plan to protect farmers against wheat crop failures. Is highly debatable as a practical measure, but has good chance of passing, perhaps in revised form.

REVISION OF FOOD AND DRUG LAW: Designed to correct weaknesses and inadequacies in the present law. Will probably pass, though not without strong opposition.

TRAIN LIMIT LAW: Would restrict length of freight trains to seventy cars. Is supported by labor as a make-work measure, opposed by railway management on the grounds that its cost would be unbearable without rate increases, and it would make operation less safe. House opposition to the law has been growing. Chance of passing seems waning.

CONDEMNATION OF SIT-DOWN STRIKES: This is not a law but an expression of congressional sentiment on a major issue of the time.
Has much better chance of passing the House now than it did last session, but it may be tabled and never brought to a vote as many members would prefer to dodge the question.

Important laws passed by the House and now on the Senate rec-
ter include:

THE ANTI-LYNCHING LAW:
This has been a burning topic for many years, and at the opening of the special session resulted in a virtual filibuster by southern members. Poor chance of passage—Southern Senators feel it would destroy the sovereignty of the states,

are prepared to talk it into oblivion whenever it appears.

REVISION OF BANKRUPTCY ACT: Not a dramatic issue, has good chance of passage.

REGULATION OF NATURAL GAS: Also has good chance of passage.

PLACING POSTMASTERS UN-DER CIVIL SERVICE STATUS:
Practically everyone agrees this should be done—but not everyone agrees the pending bill is the way to do it. Opponents say the measure would give the Administration a strangle hold on the postmasters, and result in a tremendous political machine. However, the chance for passage seems good.

REPEAL OF SALARY PUBLI-CITY LAW: Top corporation salaries are now published periodically by the SEC. Opponents say this encourages blackmail, kidnapping, other crimes; is an unwarranted invasion of private rights. Proponents say salary publicity is necessary to protect corporate stockholders from excessive and unjustifiable executive salaries.
Chance of passage only fair.

REORGANIZATION OF FEDER-AL DEPARTMENTS: Like the civil service for postmasters bill,
this measure is based on something that everyone feels is necessary in the interest of government efficiency and economy—but a great many people are opposed to the current proposal for the reason that it would place the independent bureaus, such as the FTC and ICC, under the Executive. Chance for passage fair.

This does not exhaust the list of pending measures which have passed one branch, but it lists the most important. It may be some time, however, before most of them are debated—the business recession has greatly changed the legislative outlook. A strong congressional bloc, led by prominent Democrats, feels that Congress should first deal with legislation affecting all business, such as the Capital Gains and Undistributed Profits Taxes, in an effort to the decline in production, employment and earnings.

THE AWFUL TRUTH

Adapted From The Screen Play by VERA DELMAR
Based On A Story by ARTHUR RICHMAN
Serialization by ALBERT DUFFY
A COLUMBIA PICTURE

Chapter One

"Your five and here are ten more."

Jerry Warriner rifled a red and blue chip from his pile and tossed them into the pot. "I'll see you," he said.

"Aces full," said George, showing his cards.

Jerry grinned. "Tain't enough, my good man. Four little ladies here insist 'tain't enough."

"I give up," George complained. "I haven't won a hand from you now in three, four days."

"Say, that reminds me. What time is it?" Jerry asked.

Dave Martin reached back, lifted the curtain and flooded the room with sunlight. He looked at his watch.

"Ten-thirty-five," he announced, "and a lovely day it is, too."

"Oh-oh," Jerry shook his head. "Time for me to pick up my marbles and go home like a good little boy. I'm due back from Florida this afternoon."

A few minutes later Jerry strode into the locker room of his athletic club, stripped quickly and stretched out on the massage table.

"Turn on the sun lamp, Hank," he called to the attendant, "and give me all I've got. I've got to get a deep Florida tan and I've got to get it in the next three hours. Give her the gun!"

Frank Randall, another member of the club, paused beside Jerry. "Hello, Jerry," he said. "Say, you look awfully pale for a guy who just had a week in Florida."

Jerry grinned at him. "You know," he said, "that's what I thought, too."

"Oh — hoi I get it. You didn't go to Florida at all. Putting one over on the wife eh?"

Jerry frowned. "No I'm not," he insisted. "Not the way you mean, anyhow. It's just that — well, don't

"Oh!" Lucy fluttered from Jerry's arms. "You know Armand Levalle don't you. Armand and I have had the most terrible time. His car broke down last night — this morning, rather — a million miles from nowhere and we had to stay the night at the most unspeakable inn you ever saw. It was dreadful. We were coming home from the Junior Prom and —"

"And will you forgive my automobile's imperfect performance?" Armand asked.

"Of course," Jerry said. "How could you help that?"

"I'm afraid we'll have to be going, Jerry," Frank said. "We're having an early dinner and then we're off to the theatre."

Armand was waiting for Lucy and Jerry in the living room when they had said goodbye to their guests. "The next time I take your wife out, Mr. Warriner," he said, "I hope —"

"I hope you buy a new car," Jerry cut in. "Or else I'll loan you mine. By the way, are you hungry?"

"Why, yes, I'm starved," Armand beamed.

"Then why not run out and eat a bite?" Jerry suggested pointedly.

Levalle stared at Jerry. "Mr. Warriner, what have I done?" he asked.

"That's what I'm going to find out," Jerry replied grimly.

"Why, Jerry, you can't believe —" Lucy broke in.

"We'll discuss it in private," Jerry said. "That is, if Mr. Levalle remembers where we keep our door."

Levalle bowed stiffly and left. Jerry turned to Lucy.

"Now, what have you to say for yourself?" he demanded.

Lucy sighed. "You know, I knew you were going to say just that," she said. Then she began to speak, patiently — as a mother explains something in the simplest terms to a child. "Armand was invited to the

you ever get days when you want to walk out of your office and look up the kind of people you used to chase around with before you were married?"

"But when you feel like going on a tear," Frank said, "why don't you take Lucy with you?"

Jerry shook his head. "No, Lucy wouldn't like my old gang. She's not much of a mixer, you know. She's particular who she knows, hasn't ever taken a drink — she's so darn proper. She'd think they were pretty rough."

Frank shook his head. "You're a fool if I ever saw one. You have the most perfect wife any man ever had and —"

"I know it," Jerry interrupted. "Lucy's perfect. Too perfect. Her behavior is always correct, her perfection is unquestioned." Jerry sighed. "Sometimes I wish she'd be a little human for a change."

Frank laughed. "I'll remember that," he said.

"You have a fat chance. She just sits around and waits for me to come home. Makes me feel like a rat."

"Maybe you are one," Frank said. "Anyhow, what about stopping off at my house when you get through here for a cocktail. The Barnseys and Viola Heath are going to be there."

"I have a much better idea. Let's pick up the gang and bring them all over to surprise Lucy."

But Lucy wasn't at home when Jerry and the crowd arrived to surprise her.

"Never mind. She'll probably be along before we finish our cocktails," Jerry said. "She probably ran up to her Aunt Daisy's cabin. She usually does if she gets lonely."

At that moment the hall door opened and Lucy Warriner came in. Tall, slender and graceful, with a strikingly vivacious face and a ready smile, Lucy was decidedly ornamental especially in the evening wrap and the clinging gown she was wearing. She ran to Jerry with open arms. "Darling!" she cried.

Jerry took her in his arms and kissed her. "Yes, it's good to see you," he said. "I'm in a bit of a hurry, but I'll be back over Lucy's shoulder toward the door."

PURCHASE OF CHRISTMAS SEALS URGED

Oxford County citizens are urged, along with others in the State, to purchase as freely as possible of the Christmas Tuberculosis Seals this year. Records show that in spite of all that has been done in the past to reduce the disease, the twelve months of 1936 showed an increase in the death rate from Tuberculosis in Maine over that of 1935. This means that the depression years left their mark, and the effects of it resulted, without doubt, in the slight increase mentioned above.

As each case of Tuberculosis comes from a case, it is easy to see that the fewer cases, the smaller amount of danger there is in coming in contact with the disease. In fact, scientists tell us, that no home is safe until all homes are safe. More health education and preventative work must be done, and the funds from the Christmas Seal sale make more of this protective program available. As Dorothy Thomson, the political columnist recently stated, "He who buys Seals in the fight against Tuberculosis is both an egoist and an altruist." He helps himself to better health, and also helps others achieve in securing physical health.

Only 5% of the funds raised by means of the Christmas Seals is sent out of the State. This is a small assessment which every state pays to the National Tuberculosis Association to assist that organization in research work, and its nation-wide program.

The Maine Public Health Association deeply appreciates the co-operation and interest of those assisting in the campaign. Last year Oxford County raised $1,068.23. The quota is an even $1,200 this year, so buy as generously as you can.

FRANKLIN GRANGE

Franklin Grange of Bryant Pond met Saturday night, Dec. 4. The first and second degrees were given to Merlin McLaughlin, Richard Felt and Velma Cummings. The last two were members of the Juvenile Grange and Richard Felt was the Master of the Juvenile Grange. There was a good attendance. Games were played after the meeting.

There will be a special meeting next Saturday evening, Dec. 11th. The third and fourth degrees will be given and the West Paris degree team has been invited to do the work.

1-MINUTE SAFETY TALKS

By Don Herold

We'll drive moderately,
and if we have
an accident,
it will be a nicer
one

How to Have More Trivial Accidents

If we are going to have automobile accidents, let's have little ones.

It is not such a serious matter when we dent a fender. What we don't want to dent is a skull.

How shall we select for ourselves the smaller or more insignificant or skin-deep or grade "C" accidents?

I have a book in my lap, compiled by The Travelers Insurance Company on last year's smashes and crashes. It tells us which kind of accidents are the deadliest. Let's get a line on 'em and avoid THAT kind.

About the surest way to cinch your death in an automobile accident is to mix in a little alcohol. With an intoxicated driver (you or somebody else) at the wheel, your chance of death is greater than with a sober man at the wheel. I mean if you take 1,000 drunk accidents and 1,000 sober accidents there'll be more deaths in the drunk accidents.

Even an intoxicated pedestrian has a better chance of being killed than a sober pedestrian—per accident.

There has been a lot of loose talk about the safety of driving fast. A lot of people think that it is all right to drive fast if they drive "careful." But the figures show that the rate of death per accident which involves exceeding the speed limit is much worse than the average death rate for all accidents due to improper driving practices.

Places, too, have a lot to do with the violence of your accident. The rate of death per accident on highways and at rural intersections is more than 200 per cent greater than on city streets.

Time plays a part, also. The death rate per accident after dark is about 60 per cent worse than during daylight. May all your accidents be little ones, and they're more apt to be little if you know about and avoid these deadlier spots and practices.

FLASHES FROM THE

Oxford County United Parish

Otis Cobb, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burgess, Mrs. Annie Haseltine, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Saunders, Rev. George Gledhill and Wilbur Bull represented the Oxford County United Parish at the installation of Rev. Walter Swank as pastor of the First Congregational Church of Windham Tuesday evening. Mr. Cobb, as president of the United Parish Council, extended the greetings of the Parish to Mr. Swank and the Presumptive Parish at the meeting for the examination of the candidate in the afternoon. Mr. Gledhill and Mr. Bull took part in the service in the evening.

In the meantime we are trying to find one to follow Mr. Swank in the Oxford Parish, and it is no easy job. On Monday evening the committee appointed for that purpose met at the home of President and Mrs. Cobb. Several names were considered.

Last Sunday morning Charles Wakefield, of the Senior Class at Bates College conducted the service at North Waterford. He was accompanied by Miss Turner, also a senior at Bates, his fiancée.

Sunday evening at North Waterford, Chester Millett led the Young People's Meeting, after an opening Carol Sing.

Christmas Sunday is right at hand, and those interested in rehearsing some music for a Vesper Service that afternoon are invited to meet at the Waterford Parsonage next Wednesday evening. We may want to see you Tuesday evening, also, as the time is very short.

On Monday evening several from the Parish will go to East Hiram for the monthly meeting of the Recreational Council. Lawrence Brown and Miss Doris Hunt have been appointed as delegates from the Outing Club.

An error in last week's Thanksgiving news was the omission of the names of Mr. and Mrs. George Pillsbury and son Howard of Rangeley and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Stearns and children, Priscilla and Robert, of Andover, from the list of guests at the Farwell family party at Middle Intervale.

The Village people are advised that on Monday evening if they are disturbed by the ringing of the Congregational Church bell it is neither the Fourth of July nor a fire alarm but simply a part of the production of "The Old Peabody Pew" given next Monday evening in the church. The bell is rung several times to mark part of the progress of the play.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the Masonic Lodge of Bethel for the beautiful service, also friends and neighbors of Bethel and West Bethel for their kindness and lovely tokens, in our recent bereavement.

Mrs. M. M. Whitman
Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Spring
Barbara Spring

BORN

In West Paris, Nov. 28, to the wife of Lorenzo Cole, a daughter, Mary Jane.

DIED

In Norway, Dec. 5, George Ayer, aged 63 years.

In Lewiston, Dec. 6, Miss Lena M. Felt, native of Bryant Pond, aged 65 years.

After his hands were so numbed by cold that he could not hold the rope thrown by his rescuers, Leroy Huff of Bangor seized the rope in his teeth and was pulled to safety. He fell into Kenduskeag stream from a railroad bridge near the business section of the city.

A short course for persons interested in legal problems of cooperative buying and selling organizations will be held at the University of Maine, Orono, Dec. 28-30.

Prices of clover and alfalfa seeds, except sweetclover, are the highest in 18 years and 25 to 50% higher than those of last year. Sweetclover prices are a little lower than in 1936.

Our sincere sympathy goes out to Preston Flint, and his sister, Susie, in the passing of their sister, Miss Emma Flint. Confined to her wheel chair, her thoughts and kind acts went out to many.

South Woodstock

Mrs. Frank Curtis, Mrs. Ava Omara and grandson, Jon Marden, from Guildhall, Vt., were Sunday callers of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Andrews.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Davis were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Howe and family at Bryant Pond.

Linwood Felt, Master of Franklin Grange is attending State Grange at Lewiston this week.

Very heavy rain fell here Monday night and Tuesday. There will be plenty of skating on the main highway now if it freezes.

Mrs. Josephine Thurlow, a former resident of Woodstock, is working for Mrs. Cora Perham, who is in poor health.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Littlehale have moved to the home of their daughter, Mrs. Ernest Dudley on Stearns Hill. They will care for the farm and stock this winter while Mr. and Mrs. Dudley are in Florida.

Ellis Davis and mother, Annie Davis are attending State Grange at Lewiston.

"God, the Preserver of Man" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon that will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, Dec. 12, 1937.

The Golden Text is, "The Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom: to whom be glory for ever and ever." (II Timothy 4:18).

The citations from the Bible include the following passages: "Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies;" (Psalm 103:1,3,4).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes selections from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy.

Testimonial meetings at 7:30 p. m. on the second Wednesday of each month until May.
